

6 Ways to Use Inclusive Practices as a Framework for Redesigning Education

1 Re-story

Re-Story students by designing experiences that recognize their inherent potential and build upon their strengths.

2 Redesign

Redesign instruction and assessment through meaningful, differentiated tasks that provide students with multiple ways to demonstrate knowledge and understanding

3 Restructure

Restructure intervention and enrichment so that the receipt of services is not contingent upon artificial labels.

4 Revitalize

Revitalize co-teaching to maximize the talents of staff and provide them with collaborative structures that support their work.

5 Realign

Realign service delivery to more flexibly meet the needs of all learners.

6 Reconceptualize

Reconceptualize equity so that disability is included as just another form of diversity, and to ensure that student outcomes are not predictive based upon demographic variables.
